2. Types of special educational needs we provide support for

Our college currently provides provision for a range of needs, covering all areas of the SEND Code of Practice:

- Communication and Interaction, for example, autistic spectrum disorder, speech and language difficulties, moderate/severe/profound and multiple learning difficulties.
- Cognition and Learning, for example, dyslexia, dyspraxia
- Social, Emotional and Mental Health difficulties, for example, attention deficit hyperactivity disorder (ADHD), depression and anxiety.
- Sensory and/or Physical needs, for example, visual impairments, hearing impairments, processing difficulties, epilepsy, mobility issues

3. Identifying students with SEND and assessing their needs

At the point of entry we assess each student's current skills and level of attainment, through the use of diagnostic testing and in class assessments. Curriculum staff make regular assessments of progress throughout the academic year and identify students whose progress:

- is significantly slower than that of their peers starting from the same baseline despite intervention from curriculum staff.
- fails to match or better the student's previous rate of progress
- fails to close the attainment gap between the student and their peers
- widens the attainment gap

This may include progress in areas other than attainment, for example social needs.

Curriculum staff have an internal referral process to flag students to the additional learning support team.

Slow progress and low attainment will not automatically mean a student is recorded as having special educational needs (SEN).

When deciding whether additional support is required, we start with the desired outcomes, including what we expect in terms of attainment and progress, and the views and wishes of the student and their parents/carers. We will then determine what support is needed and whether as a college we can provide that support by adapting our core offer or whether something in addition is needed.

4. Consulting and involving students and parents

We will start discussions with the student and their parents/carers as early as possible when identifying whether the student needs additional support whilst they are at college. These can be through the application process, through to the student being at college. During these conversations we aim to ensure that:

- all staff at college that are involved with the student have a good understanding of areas of strength and areas of difficulty
- we take into account concerns the parent/carer and/or student has
- everybody involved understands and has agreed to the outcomes we are aiming to achieve.
- everybody is clear on what the next steps are
- notes of these early discussions will be added to the student's electronic additional learning support folder.

5. Assessing and reviewing students progress towards outcomes

We will follow the graduated approach and the four-part cycle of assess, plan, do, review.

Curriculum staff will work with the additional learning support team to carry out a clear analysis of student need, and draw upon:

- the teachers' and key support workers' assessment and experience of the student
- the student's previous progress and attainment or behaviour

- the student's individual development in comparison to their peers
- the views and experience of parents/carers
- the student's own views
- advice from external support services, if relevant

Progress and support will be reviewed regularly.

Every teacher and support staff who work with and support the student will be made aware of their needs, the outcomes sought and the support that is being offered by college, as well as any additional teaching strategies that are required. This will be in the form of our online system (EMRIS) with each student having a support record that forms the one page profile. We will monitor how effective the support is and the impact of any interventions of student progress. If needed, there will be a review and other interventions will be agreed and put in place.

6. Supporting students moving between phases and preparing for adulthood

As a college we will share information with other schools, colleges and other settings a student may move to. Before any information is shared we will agree with the parent/carer and student which information will be shared as part of this.

7. Our approach to teaching students with SEND

All teachers at college are teachers of SEND and are responsible and accountable for the progress and development of all the students that they have in their class.

High quality teaching and learning is the first step in how we respond to all students who have SEND. This approach will be differentiated for individual student needs in the classroom.

We also provide the following interventions, based on need and suitability:

- out of class support 1:1 or small groups
- an allocated Key Support Worker
- diagnostic testing and exam access arrangement assessments.
- targeted support for specific needs
- Additional Support Tutorial (AST) sessions with curriculum staff

8. Adaptations to the curriculum and learning environment

To ensure students' needs are met we make a range of adaptations, such as:

- we ensure that our curriculum is differentiated to allow all students to access it, for example, the way in which curriculum staff group students together, teaching styles used within the classroom, content of the lesson, etc.
- throughout the college we follow dyslexia friendly strategies.
- the resources we use within the curriculum are and will be adapted to meet the specific needs of students within the classroom.
- support staff will adapt to student need
- Additional Learning Support can provide recommended aids for students such as coloured overlays, visual timetables, larger fonts etc.
- our teaching will be differentiated to meet student needs such as, giving longer processing times, sharing lesson resources before the lesson, reading instructions aloud, etc.

Our accessibility plan can be found on the college website
<https://www.blackpoolsixth.ac.uk/information/policies/>

This may include equipment for the classroom to ensure access to the curriculum, for example voice recorders, or equipment to meet individual needs, for example adapted desks or seating.

12. Evaluating the effectiveness of SEND provision

At college we continuously evaluate the provision of students with SEND by:

- reviewing the students individual progress towards their outcomes at each curriculum review monitoring point throughout the academic year
- reviewing the impact of interventions after 6 weeks
- using student questionnaires to gather feedback on our SEND provision
- monitoring by the Head of Additional Learning Support
- using provision maps to measure progress and attendance
- holding annual reviews for students with EHC plans, inviting the appropriate local authority and other relevant agencies
- reviewing the SEND action plans of all students with an EHC plan every half term

13. Enabling students with SEND to engage in activities available to those in the school who do not have SEND

All of our extra-curricular activities (6Xtra and 6Advance) and college visits are open and available to all of our students.

All students are encouraged to go on college visits through their curriculum subjects and get involved with the wider college community through our 6Xtra programme.

No student is ever excluded from taking part in these activities because of their SEND or disability.

Key Support Workers within Additional Learning Support may accompany students on visits to support the student to access the visit.
